04 CONCLUSION

OVERVIEW

- The purpose of this analysis is to examine Bright Coffee Shop's sales, products, and store performance to identify trends and insights.
- The goal is to make strategic decisions that will increase revenue and enhance product performance.

Revenue by Month

- Total revenue (Jan - Jun): R698,0812, from 149,116 products sold.
- Revenue contribution is 12% in January to 24% in June, showing steady growth after February's dip.
- This upward trend suggests demand for hot beverages as winter approaches.
- This highlights the importance of seasonal promotions during colder months.

Revenue by day of the Week

- Revenue is highest on Monday and Friday, while Saturday shows a slight decline and other Weekdays remain steady.
- Focus on maximizing Monday and Friday sales, maintain weekday performance, and run Saturday promotions to smooth demand and manage inventory effectively.

TIME & TRANSACTIONS

Revenue by time of day

- Morning drives revenue(R388,289; 55,6%) while night is minimal(R2,936; 0,42%), showing us a large gap.
- Afternoon(R163,598; 23,4%) and evening (R143,990; 20,6%) are steady.
- Focus on the peak hours, maintain efficiency during steady hours, and boost the afternoon or evening with promotions.

Revenue by Transaction Volume

- Transaction volume grew steadily from January (17,314) to June (35,352).
- Early months (Jan – Feb) were slower, which may indicate seasonal or promotional effects.
- The largest increase occurred from March onwards; therefore, we need to investigate the early months and ensure sufficient stock and staff during high-transaction volume months.

STORE & PRODUCT

Revenue by Store Location

- Revenue from January to June 2023 is evenly distributed across all three coffee shops locations, with less than a 1% difference between them.
- This indicates that all stores are performing well, and the focus should be on boosting sales to further improve product performance and overall revenue.

Total products sold per store

- Lower Manhattan has slightly fewer sales.

STORE & PRODUCT - CONTINUED

Top 10 Best Selling Products

- The top 10 best-selling products generated R177,375.25, which accounts for 25% of the total revenue.
- This goes to show that a small set of products contributes significantly to the overall revenue, highlighting key items for promotions or inventory focus.

Revenue by Product Category

Chart Title

- The Revenue is dominated by Coffee(38,6%) and Tea(28,1%), while other categories only contribute a small portion.
- The lowest is packaged chocolate at 0,6%, which needs evaluation to consider reviewing product placement.

HOURLY REVENUE

Hourly revenue by store location

- Astoria opens at 7 am, while Hell's Kitchen and Lower Manhattan open at 6 am.
- The early morning period from 6 am to 10 am shows strong demand, showing customers prefer to purchase products soon after the store opens.
- Consider targeted promotions or breakfast combos in the morning to maximize high-demand periods.
- After 10 am, consider hour deals or product bundles to boost hourly revenue.

RECOMMENDATIONS

Run seasonal and morning promotions

- Revenue grew steadily from January(12%) to June(24%), showing rising demand as winter approached.
- I recommend we run breakfast combo specials to maximize high-demand periods.

Ensure staffing and stock readiness

- Morning sales (55,6%) dominate revenue, with a sharp drop after 10 AM.
- I recommend staff and stock readiness during peak months and hours to sustain growth
- I also recommend the staff roster to be in shifts since we know the peak and off-peak months and hours, this will help us pay staff salaries accordingly.

Boost afternoon and weekend sales

- Monday and Friday are peak revenue days, while other days are steady, and Saturday dips slightly.
- I recommend a 1-hour limited-time offer and a loyalty reward points system.

Prioritize top performing products

- The top 10 best-selling products generate 25% of total revenue, driven mostly by Coffee (38,6%) and Tea (28,1%)
- I recommend we prioritize top products and review low sellers, and save funds
- It is better to specialize in a few products and maximize profits.
